In 1987, a British-based team competed in the Tour de France for the first time in almost two decades. The ANC-Halfords squad were decimated by the punishing pace, the manager walked out during one of the Alpine stages, five of the nine riders and some of the staff never made it to Paris, and most of the personnel went unpaid. ANC were the definitive innocents abroad and it became one of the great sporting misadventures of all time. If that wasn't bad enough for ANC, a tabloid journalist travelled with them for the full three weeks. Jeff Connor's account of the Tour, Wide-Eyed and Legless, became a classic and was later voted number one in Cycle Sport's list of the best cycling books of all time. Now, 25 years on, Connor revisits the scene of the crime, tracks down the participants and discovers exactly how their fortunes were changed, some irrevocably, by the '87 Tour. Field of Fire tells a moving tale of sporting disillusionment, heartbreak, anger - and humour.

Single and no longer young, Alice is at a low ebb. A long and unsatisfactory relationship with a photojournalist ended in Kosovo just before the break-up of Yugoslavia. She is haunted by events for which she feels responsible. Some years later, still suffering the aftermath, she leaves London for the West Country to stay with her best friend, Martha and her doctor husband, Edmund, whose response to Alice has always been ambiguous, as is hers to him. Could this, she wonders, be love? Seeking to find her way through her present confusion, she goes to Bill, a counsellor friend of theirs. She also tries past life regression therapy in which she half-believes herself to be Joan, Shakespeare ' s sister. Coincidentally she comes across a book published in the 1930s by someone who, inspired by Virginia Woolf ' s ideas in A Room of One ' s Own, wrote as though she herself was Joan. In contrast to these real and imagined women, Alice has all the freedom and opportunities of a modern western woman. She decides to join an expedition to take a van-load of toys and clothes to an Albanian orphanage. On this trip she recognises someone last seen in Kosovo and her imagination goes into overdrive. The outcome is, however, unexpected. Deftly moving between the sixteenth century and the twentieth, between Dartmoor, London and the Balkans, and the inner life and the external, the various strands of the story come neatly together at its culmination, with Alice stirring into life once more with a new understanding – and a new love.
